Protection-An Illustration.

The city of Richmond is about to ere City Hall. The Free Trader would advise her to buy the stone to be used in its construction in Ohio or wherever else she can buy it more cheaply. The Protectionist would advise her to build it out of our own Richmond granite even if it shall cost more. Mr. WAT-TERSON thinks the latter advice unilosophical and contrary to the teachings of most or at least some political economists. He says we must buy "wherever we can buy cheapest," and of course employ the contractor, whether a Virginian or a Bostonian, who will put it up for the smallest sum of money. The Protectionist would reverse all this. He would keep Richmond's money at home, and he holds that if Richmond pays five hundred thousand dollars to Richmond workmen, whether for granite or for the work of putting up the building, and all that money is kept here, she will not have lost one cent, since she will, as a corporation, possess a five-hundredthousand-dollars City Hall, at the same time that she will possess as a community the five hundred thousand dollars which the City Hall will have cost.

But suppose the contractors and all the workmen come from Boston, and take back home with them when they return all the money which the City Hall will have cost except the few thousand dollars which they will have paid for board, &c., whilst at work upon it. Let them carry, say, four hundred thousand dollars to Boston and leave hundred thousand dollars here. In that case, the active capital of this city will have been reduced by four handred thousand dollars-a sum equal to he capital of one or more of our banks. reader will at once jump to the lusion that a dozen transactions of he same kind would take away a sum ual to the capital of all the banks in is city of all sorts, and he might begin to think that after all there might be some truth in Mr. RANDALL'S

Lesson for the Democrats ler the caption, "An Alternative v." the Boston Advertiser (Repubcan) calls attention to the fact that " a great many Republicans, whose judgment does not approve of a reliance upon remnants of the southern question as the main issue upon which to seek a recovery of power in the National Government, are undecided as to the best course for their party to pursue," and

"So much will depend upon the action of the Democrats that it does not seem worth while to be in haste to mark out a party policy. If, for example, the members of that party at the South shall fail to fulfil the prophesies which have been freely made as to their action in case the Democrats should be re stored to power through their assistance, and the evils foretold shall not result, it would be manifestly futile to continue the appeals to fears and preju-dices which had been shown to have no foundation. Representative southand Garland insist that all the South wants is peace and good government, and declare that the negro will nd ample protection in all his rights and privileges under the new Adminis-tration. The anticipated rush for Federal offices from 'hungry and thirsty southerners has not begun, and the general tone of the press and the pub-lic men of that section is distinctly moderate and conservative. A conthe South is clearly impossible. Can the Republican party do better than to wait and see what is to be before deciding to renew the contention? It may be chivalrous to fight wind-mills, but it is not politic."

Again the Advertiser says : "It is the function and the duty of a party in opposition, as the Republican party soon will be, to formulate and party soon will be, to formulate and press an alternative policy, antagopress an alternative policy, antagonizing that of the party in power; and Leeping before the people a knowledge of what they would get in decreeing a change. In the divisions, the timidity, and the lack of governing capacity in the party temporarily in power, it will find an opportunity to present and press an affirmative substitute policy that shall commend it to the renewed confidence of the country."

Read this between the lines, and there is a lesson in it that the Democrats would do well to take to heart. The plain English of it is : wait for Demotie blunders; and in no one particuar can a greater blunder be made-1 nder that would cause more reicing among the Republicans-han in tter of the educational issue, The sentiment in favor of the BLAIR till is spreading rapidly, among the peo-ple of the South especially. As we have before stated, the Democratic National Committee gave assurance in the last campaign that that bill was favored by the National Democratic party. The city could it desire for nity could it desire for "an-tagonizing the policy of the par-ty in power and keeping be-fore the people a knowledge of what they would get in decreeing a change?" Already a Republican Senate can lay claim to having passed the bill, and for tralize the effects of this claim would be to play directly into the hands of the Republican party and give it a solid foundation upon which to build up a popular policy—give it "an oppor-tunity to present and press an af-firmative substitute policy" which the office of general was more in keeping with his soldierly tastes. It was thus that he accepted the unsought office of President, and now, looking back at the events of the day, it seems to me that, after serving his to the command of the army. It strikes me that the people who clothed him with the honors of President, if the question had been fairly presented to them, would have said that they did not design that by accepting these hon-ors he should forfeit the life position of general which he had won by his gen-propose that Congress will pass an act simply reviving the rank of general, with the understanding that the Presi-dent will immediately nominate General Grant to fill it, and, if thought best, it

Rev. J. L. M. Curry has recently published a very strong letter, urging the passage of the Blair bill, placing it above all other ques-tions which will engage the attention of JOSEPH R. ANDERSON.

A Toronto (Ont.) special says: Residents of the town of Medford, on Georgian bay, were greatly startled yesterday morning at daybreak by hearing the roar of water rushing past their doors on Front street. They were soon astir, and found that Vain's mill-dam had been broken by the constant washing of the waters driven by the wind against it onlieting an immense volume of water of the waters driven by the wind against it and letting an immense volume of water into the place. There was a small leak discovered in the dam a day or two ago, which the proprietors had intended to have repaired shortly, but during the night before it broke it became larger and let a great stream of water through, which in a few hours washed away nearly the entire dam. Much damage has been done to property and many valuable buildings have been washed away by the flood, which has inundated nearly the whole town. undated nearly the whole town. Front street, which is the principal thoroughfare of the town, is now the bed of a rapid-running river. The water was still rising at last accounts. and it is feared that if a strong west wind should set in it will blow the waters of the bay through the broken dam and sweep the whole town away. The amount of damage by the water is great, but cannot yet be ascertained, as little intelligence has been obtained, from the telegraph office there to-day.

A handsome bridge structure has been swept away.

A German Woman Kills Her Chile and Seriously Wounds Herself.

A Rochester (N. Y.) special says The little town of Macedon, eighteen miles from Rochester on the direct road east, is the scene of a tragedy most mysterious in its nature. Ordinarily that village is a very quiet place, with scarcely anything to cause a ripple of excitement. A young German woman named Anna Dickhof arrived in the village yesterday afternoon on an emigrant train. She could not speak a word of English, and sat in the station-house all night. No one disturbed her, and she was given a couch to sleep upon with her little child, a girl eleven months old. This morning about 4 o'clock Bag-gage-Agent Patrick Quinn heard a sound as if a woman was vomiting, and, turning up the light in the waitingroom, discovered the little child lying dead on the couch, with its throat cut from ear to ear, and a pool of blood upon the floor.

The mother also lay apparently life less, with arms extended and blood trickling down from a stab in her throat and staining her dress. On the floo near by was an open penknife, the blade of which was covered with blood. Leaving the mother and child untouched, Quinn ran to the village for a physician and found Dr. Lacey, who at once re-paired to the Central station-house at Macedon. Meanwhile Christian Dumtee, a constable of the village, was walking along the road leading from the village to the station-house. About 200 rods south of the station he found a woman lying in the snow by the roadside insensible and covered with blood.

Returning to consciousness while Quinn was absent, the German woman had walked out of the station and had fallen where the constable found her. Mr. Dumtee at once removed her to the house of Richard Deyo, only a few rods distant, where she was when Dr. Lacey visited her. The child was dead, proba-bly having lived but a moment after its throat was cut. The mother's wound was found to be not so serious, as the knife had only been stabbed into her throat, inflicting a wound the size of the blade. The windpipe is partially severed, but the woman stands a fai chance to recover.

The only explanation of the tragedy is that the mother murdered her child and then made an attempt at suicide. The infant was removed to Brundage's dertaking-rooms, where an inquest will be held at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning. The motive for the crime is not apparent. In April last August Dickhof left his wife and a three-months-old child in Berlin, while he came to this country and engaged as a farm-laborer in the village of Lincoln. On the 13th of November he sent his wife Anna $27 to come with her child to this country. Lincoln is ten miles from Macedon, and as August did not expect her so soon she found no one waiting for her when she arrived, and, having no place to go, was compelled to remain in the station over night. Whether or not her act was the result of despondency in the behef that her husband had deserted her is only conjecture.

August Dickhof was informed of the tragedy, and at once came to the village, only to find his child dead and his wife in a critical condition. When he was taken into the room where she lay she recognized him, and after an embrace said, in tones of agony, "Where is my little Lizzie? Bring me my little girl." All through the day she repeated the request, and toward eve ning became delirious and constant-ly called for her child. She is a remarkably handsome German wo man, twenty-four years of age, and was neatly dressed. Her husband is two years her senior, and although he has been several months in this country. he is unable to speak English. He is heart-broken over this occurrence. It is believed that the woman did the horrible deed while temporarily insane.

A CARD.—IN ORDER TO COMA CARD.—IN ORDER TO COMin the sycamore-lumber sections in the West and to give my tobacco-factory patrons, of Virginia and North Carolina specially, the full benefit of my facilities. I have erected a large TOBACO-BOX FACTORY at Tiffin, O., with railroad connections from three railroads, and have relieved myself of my general pine-box- and planting-mill business by surrendering the same to Messrs. Hardwicke & Mitchell, who have purchased most of my machinery and rented a large part of my building, and propose to continue a pine-working business.
They have been in my employ for about fifteen years, and I take picasure in commending and requesting my pine-box patrons to encourage them.
I have reserved ample room and steampower for my purposes, and have determined to serve plug- and smoking-tobaccofactorles specialty with BUTTONWOOD BOXES, PINE CASES, and such work asbelongs to tobacco-bax factories particu'ariy.
Feeling thankful for past generous patronsize, I hope to merit a continuance, with an increase, in the specialty I have determined upon. Respectruty,
